University Assisted Housing Program for Faculty and Staff

When does a good deal on a home become a great deal? When Loyola helps you pay for it.

The University Assisted Housing Program can provide qualified faculty and staff members with up to $10,000 to put toward a house or condo located near one of Loyola's Chicago-area campuses.

The amount of the 5-year forgivable loan depends on your median household income and the location of the home to be purchased. A maximum of 25 loans will be available each year.

You do not have to be a first-time buyer and there are no income limits for the program. You must, however, use the home as your primary residence.

The University Assisted Housing Program works with the Northside Community Development Corporation and the West Cook Homeownership Center to educate participants about home ownership, as well as connect faculty and staff with available funding to make home ownership a reality.
